Republican Congressional District Convention.

First Meeting.
A Republican Convention of the First Congressional District of the State of Wisconsin, composed of the counties of Kenosha, Racine, Watworth, Rock and Jefferson, is hereby called to meet at the village of Geneva, in Walworth county, on the 10th day of August, 1882, at 12 o'clock noon of that day, to nominate a candidate for Congress for the District for the next ensuing two years. Each Senate and Assembly District will be entitled to two delegates in the convention.

JOHN E. DENNETT,
D. B. EARNES,
E. ENOS,
T. G. EISEL,
H. S. THORP,
Committee.

When Senator Voorhees said he was "sick of false pretenses," he did not speak for the Democratic party. However, his party has always had a sickly existence on false pretenses.

The women in California who favor female suffrage, will nominate one Mrs. J. W. Stow for Governor this fall. It is estimated that she will receive 2,000 votes out of an aggregate of 150,000.

Miss Frances E. Willard, who is one of the ablest and most earnest workers in this country in the cause of temperance, has opened a school in Illinois for the education of temperance lecturers.

If eight-tenths of the members of Congress only measured the length of their speeches by what they know of the subject they talk on, their speech would be very short and an early adjournment reached.

They are talking about a compromise in Pennsylvania, but so far it has resulted in nothing but talk. The Independents, or more properly the bolters, it would seem, would rather push the Democrats into power, than make an honorable compromise with the Regular Republicans.

The Tariff Commission is enjoying the festivities of Coney Island under the favorable circumstances of receiving ten dollars a day each and expenses. When the members get tired of sea bathing, boat-riding, dancing, and promenade, they look over the tariff rates for a diversion.

Captain Frank Jacobs, who commands the tug O. B. Green, on Lake Michigan, has fallen heir to a little fortune by the death of a relative in Germany, and last Saturday the little town of Sturgeon Bay in this State, was considerably excited when the mail brought him a check for $32,400.

General Grant has publicly expressed his opinion on the Egyptian question. He thinks England is in the right, and says the people of Egypt are ten times worse off than the negroes South. He believes an English protectorate would help to develop the resources of the country and improve the condition of the people.

There is a chance for the United States Senate to do itself a great service, and it should not be slow in making up its mind to do it. The House refused to concur in the Senate amendments to the River and Harbor bill, and it has been suggested, and the suggestion come very timely, that it would be a good thing if the Senate refused to pass the bill at all. Twenty millions, the bill provides, shall be spent upon the rivers and harbors of the country, and as this is hardly less than outrageous profligacy, it is time the Senate take hold and at this particular and opportune moment, to begin a reform.

The Milwaukee Republican-Sentinel says, "Despite the extended search by the police, Officer Whitehead, of the Homan Society, and Mr. Spencer and his friends, throughout yesterday, the day passed with no findings whatever of the missing son of Mr. Spencer. Many supposed clues have been followed, only to end unsatisfactorily. It was reported that the boy had been seen Monday twelve miles up the Northwestern Road, but an officer detailed to investigate found the boy who had been seen not to have been the person sought for. While there are many theories given in explanation of the mystery, there is lacking the evidence to give probability to any of them."

There is a touch of pathos in the following plaintive note which was sent to the Interior Office for publication, and which is printed exactly as written and spelled:

Amsterdam, N. Y., July 15, 82

Editor Dear Sir will you insert the following letter in your valuable paper and asks other papers to copy

To Mrs. Addie Peck Please return home to your husband and children you will be forgiven or told me where you are and I will send you money to come home with I want to see you real bad and I love you and I don't know how to get you home

If the transient wife, who has probably gone off with a landowner man, will not respond to this tender appeal to return to her husband, her boy and her home, she must be of the kind who are beyond redemption.

The State Journal, in commenting upon the recent editorial in the Gazette, in regard to the delegation going to Chicago to secure, if possible, greater passenger facilities on the Northwestern road, says: "For many years the project of building a branch from Janesville to Evansville has been agitated by turns, but the views of the people of these places and the railroad authorities could not quite so far meet upon the subject as to bring about any practical results, though we believe the people of Janesville went so far at one time as to procure a preliminary survey of the route, and it was proved to be easy and practicable. Anyone can see, by casting an eye upon the map of that portion of the country, that such a branch would make the line from Chicago through Janesville to Madison almost an air-line, but from some inexplicable cause the route, which looks so feasible and so advantageous both to the cities concerned and to the railway company, has for long years remained untouched. * * * * *

GARFIELD'S HOME.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—The Star says: "The Ohio Republican Association last evening appointed William Lawrence, M. J. Root, F. C. Campbell, E. C. Ford, and Colonel Boynton a committee to consider the advisability of purchasing from the Garfield estate the residence of the late President on Thirteenth and I streets, to be used as State headquarters, and report a plan for the consummation of such a purchase. Prof. H. C. Spencer said he was in Cleveland a few days ago. Mrs. Garfield had expressed a desire to sell the property, but felt disinclined to sell to a stranger, and suggested it was possible that the Ohio citizens in Washington might feel inclined to purchase and convert it into a State headquarters. Her late husband valued the dwelling and lot at $18,000, but she thought $15,000 would now be a fair valuation, and in the event of such a sale being effected she would place the library in the east wing of the house in exactly the same condition it was when occupied by Gen. Garfield as his study while he was a Representative in Congress."

A SENSATION.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—There is no incipient sensation brewing, as usual, in Congress. A letter has been written by one J. J. Newell, formerly of Adrian, Mich., in which he declares he has documents and papers to prove that no less than $2,000,000 in money, stock, and land was furnished for pool in 1864 to 1870 to secure the passage of the bill making the land grant to the Texas Pacific railroad. His communication is very voluminous, and makes specific allegations, withholding only the names of persons involved. He says that $300,000 in money and $200,000 stock were placed in the hands of two Senators to disburse where it would do the most good in that body and it was properly placed so that eventually the grant was made in consequence. He alleged, also, that $1,000,000 in stock was used to pass the bill in the House by the votes of members who took it at the price for the favor of the corporation. He asks the committee to name the day when he can be heard, and he will demonstrate that an investigation should be made.

THE RED MEN.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Mr. Haskell, of Kansas, aided by Governor Pound, of Wisconsin, secured the passage in the House to-day of a bill to use unoccupied military barracks as training schools for Indian youth. The bill prescribes that the Secretary of War may establish normal and industrial training schools for Indian youth from the native tribes having educational treaty claims upon the United States, in any vacant barracks not required for military occupation, and may detail one or more officers of the army for duty in connection with Indian education, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior. It provides that moneys appropriated for general purposes of education among the Indians may be expended for the support and maintenance of these training schools. Mr. Pound made a forcible presentation of the subject and the necessary and good results which would follow. The bill passed by an unanimous vote.

OBITUARY.

WATERTOWN, July 18.—Wm. Dennis, one of the old pioneers of Wisconsin and extensively known throughout the State, died suddenly to-day at his home in this city, aged 73 years. Deceased was a native of Rhode Island and came to Wisconsin in 1837, settling at this place. He was the first postmaster at Watertown; a member of the Territorial House of Representatives in 1841; elected to the first constitutional convention from Dodge county; member of the Assembly in 1853; a State senator in 1848 and 1849; bank commissioner of the State from January 2, 1857, to January 7, 1858, and had also held the office of mayor of this city. In all these various positions he ably and faithfully discharged his duties. Deceased was possessed of eminent financial ability, and for some years was president of the Wisconsin National bank. For the last few years he had an extensive business interest at Watertown, Dakota. Mr. Dennis leaves a wife, three sons and two daughters. Both daughters and one of his sons are married.

is a good philosophy, but to do so you must have health. It is not over-estimated, or blood is out of order, use Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets," which are mild, yet certain in their operation. Of all druggists.

KILLED WHILE HUNTING.

PORTAGE, July 18.—A very sad accident by shooting occurred about 11 o'clock this morning, resulting in the death of Ernest Rockwood, son of Dr. R. C. Rockwood, night operator at the St. Paul depot. He, in company with another young man were out hunting in the Baraboo woods five miles from home, and in getting in the wagon to return home, caught his gun, causing it to explode, the charge striking him under the left arm, passing through the shoulder and severing the large artery. He was brought home immediately by his comrades, and the arm amputated, but he died from loss of blood. He was 21 years old.

SERGEANT MASON.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—The Judge Advocate General to-day submitted to the Secretary of War his report on the petition for the release of Sergeant Mason on the ground he is illegally confined. General Swain merely reviews from a military law standpoint the legal points raised in the petition, and makes no recommendation. He adheres strictly to the views expressed in his original report on the case, that the proceedings of the court-martial were irregular and illegal. The case will not be reported to the President until after the return of Secretary Lincoln. Secretary Chandler is Acting Secretary of War.

WISCONSIN DENTISTS.

MILWAUKEE, July 18.—The annual session of the State Dental Association met in this city this morning. The annual address was delivered by Dr. G. H. McCaussey, of Janesville. Preliminary business only was transacted. A large number of dentists are present from all over the State. To-morrow evening Dr. F. N. Turner, M. D., D. D. S., of New York, will give an illustrated lecture. This session will close Friday evening.

BENNETT AT MILWAUKEE.

MILWAUKEE, July 18.—D. M. Bennett, the noted liberalist of New York, lectured on "Constitutionalism" in the Academy of Music in this city last night. A good-sized audience had assembled to hear Mr. Bennett, but before he had half concluded his lecture his obscure remarks drew a large number from the house. The liberals who engaged Bennett to lecture are mortified and disgusted at the result of their effort. None of them knew the speaker, except by reputation, and they little expected to hear a discourse of this kind in its details as it was illogical in argument.

THE SURGEONS' BILLS.

The speech of Congressman Williams on the subject.

When the House of Representatives on the 14th had under discussion the bill for paying the surgeons of the late President Garfield, Mr. Williams said:

When the assassin's bullet struck our much-loved Garfield to the earth there was no deeper horror anywhere than that which thrilled the hearts of the people of Wisconsin. The voice of her people and the votes of her representatives had first presented his name at Chicago, and it was with swelling pride that they sat in the Senate in the position for which they had named him. My colleague and friend (General Briggs) will not dispute with me that no people in this country will go further than ours to do justice to his memory, and would sooner by generosity than come short of full reparation for the medical treatment he had charge of him in those awful days of suffering and anxiety.

Mr. Speaker, perhaps no such other case was ever known in this world as that which saw these terrible eighty days. No such responsibility anywhere that we know of was ever placed on mortal man as was placed on those who had charge of the medical treatment of the President. Nerves of steel stretched everywhere from the White House, and there was no pang there that had not its responsive shudder in every house in the land.

There these medical men stood in the glare of the world. Each pulse-beat only thrilled the country, but thrilled all Europe as well. The people in every town and city stood out at morning, noon, and evening to read the bulletins from the sick chamber of the President. Every day was a crisis in his life. Every hour was a crisis in their professional reputation of the medical man in charge. A great fault blame would have brought upon them the concentrated vengeance of mankind. What general can stand on life-field with greater responsibilities? One life is as sacred as another. But how can we compare this to a case of ordinary private practice? Who would take the responsibility of being reviewed, even as these physicians have been reviewed in the House of Representatives to-day by those who make no pretensions to science or skill, or know the actual facts? And yet these discussions go on everywhere, and might prove fatal to the professional standing of those gentlemen. Yet there they were, day by day and night by night, subjected to such a strain and such a responsibility as men seldom feel anywhere. They stood in the very white heat and fumes of the world's pent up humanity.

These men were placed in attendance, there. Dr. Bliss was assigned the place of leading physician. Whether he is competent or not I neither know nor care for the purpose of this discussion. His diagnosis and treatment were endorsed and adopted by two men conceded to be among the foremost, if not the most eminent in their profession in the United States, Drs. Hamilton and Agnew.

The people of Wisconsin were 1,000 miles from the bedside of the stricken and suffering President. Speaking for them to-day, I am confident they would never undertake to substitute their individual impressions, opinions, or prejudices for those trained and skilled professional men, who were on the ground, acting in view of all the facts which medical science could give. There may have been mistakes. There may have been individual wrongs; but who can settle them here? What one of us would assume to do it?

Mr. Speaker, I have seen a million of dollars voted here; yes, ten millions, twenty millions; yes, a hundred millions voted in fifteen minutes, without a word, and it did not grieve me, for I knew that some of it would go to the very men whom our dead President led to battle. Yet, when we talk of $50,000 or $75,000 as the utmost limit for this case, it leads to analysis and discussion in the face of the American people and of the world.

These Representatives from Ohio ask of this House to limit the amount to $70,000, to strike out the restrictions, so that it may be submitted to a competent board who can revise and consider these claims and adjust them with proper caution. Why not do it?

Sir, let us have no more wrangling here over the loved and lamented dead. By the memory of the man who sat in that seat, [pointing to General Garfield's late seat] by the memory of the position which he held among us, by the agony which he suffered, by the trial put upon his widow and suffering children, with such humble power as I possess I appeal to both sides of this House, here and now, to adopt the suggestion of Amos Townsend, his personal friend, and let us have no more wrangling about it, but adopt the amendment of the gentleman from Ohio, [Mr. Townsend.] [Great applause.]

Preparing for Drought.

A severe and protracted drought may not occur this season, but it is the part of wisdom to be prepared for it if it comes. The lessons taught by the drought last year should not be forgotten. Many of the most prosperous farmers in the country were losers by their neglect to prepare for a shortage in pasture. Grass stopped growing during the latter part of the summer, and became almost as dry as chaff. Cows gave but a very small amount of milk, and there was a scarcity of butter and cheese in almost all parts of the country. Dairy men and farmers who had any to sell received good prices, but only those who were able to provide sufficient food for their cows were benefited by the rise. Cows that fell out in giving a supply of milk during the season of drought did not regain their ability to give the usual amount when there was sufficient feed. It is very bad policy to allow cows to reduce their milk record on account of insufficient feed during the summer and fall. No amount of feed will bring up the yield of milk the same season after it has begun to decline. This is the testimony of the most observing dairymen in the country. Cows gave little milk during last fall and winter on account of the injury received while feeding in the pastures during the latter part of summer. Young animals that suckled their dams were generally in poor condition on account of an insufficiency of milk. There was a scarcity of well-fattened heaves and sheep in most parts of the country. Many farmers were obliged to sell off a portion of their stock in order to obtain means to winter the animals that were left. The same was true in many sections of the country they disposed of them at a great sacrifice.

The farmers who made the most money last year were those who had plenty of food during the entire season. Their cows gave a large amount of milk, the products of which brought an extraordinary price. They were able to turn off their cattle and sheep in good condition for the butcher and to realize a large sum for them. Their young animals did well and advanced in weight. They were able to buy stock of less fortunate farmers and to profit by their misfortune. In many cases cattle and sheep doubled in value within a few months. Had it not been for the very favorable winter the amount of feed in several states had not been sufficient to have kept all the stock. Some seasons it is easy to make up for a deficient grass crop by feeding corn when it exists in abundance. But such was not the case last year. There was not sufficient corn in many parts of the country to fatten the hogs and supply the other wants for it. The straw produced in most parts of the country was not utilized as it should be, and never will be till roots or other succulent food are raised to feed along with it. Straw is unsuited for an entire ration of any kind of stock. It supplies only a part of the needed elements of nutrition. It is unsuitable for the wants of milk cows and young animals of every kind. In most European countries it is utilized to much greater advantage, for the reason that it is fed in connection with roots. When the use of ensilage becomes general in this country, if it ever does, straw will be of greater value than it now is, for it can be fed in connection with it to excellent advantage. It will afford a desirable change from moist food. It will furnish a variety of food, and it secures a good appetite. It is plain that the time has come when we can no longer feed the stock of the country on hay and corn. They have become too precious.

The season for the planting of the standard crops of the farm is over for the year, but there is still time and opportunity to put in crops that will furnish feed that will be wanted in case of a drought. Sweet corn, if planted any time during this month, will give a crop to feed to milk cows, hogs and young animals should the pastures become short in July and August. If there are timely rains during the latter part of the growing season it can be cut up and cured, and it will make excellent food for stock of all kinds during the winter. With the exception of grass there is no better food for milk cows than sweet corn. A patch of it should be raised in the vicinity of every young where cows and hogs are kept, to be in readiness in case the supply of grass and clover is inadequate. The labor of cutting and feeding it is light in comparison with the good accomplished by it. Hogs relish sweet food and sugar is one of the best fat-forming substances that can be obtained. German and common millet, as well as the variety known as Hungarian grass, can be sown to good advantage any time this month, and will produce more feed than can be obtained from almost any cultivated crop. It helps out the hay supply and can be fed without liability of injury to any kind of stock except horses. Northern sugarcane can also be planted for stock purposes during this month. Its value for a forage crop is just beginning to be appreciated. In the future it will doubtless be extensively grown, especially in parts of the country quite liable to severe and protracted droughts. It is very valuable for sheep, and from all accounts cattle and hogs do well on it. In parts of the country where the winters are open it is not materially injured by standing on the ground where it grows.—Chicago Times.

Fitted to a Chair.

In a fashionably-furnished store, I did not at first know what to make of the actions of a young woman. She was elaborately gotten up as to clothes, and had some advantages in the way of natural good looks, so that she was altogether a thing of considerable beauty. She was in an upholstered easy chair before a big mirror, and striking various poses—now lying back on the soft stuff, both her arms spread out negligently; now leaning against one of the sides, with elbow supporting her body, and sitting bolt upright in the middle. All the while she regarded her reflection in the glass with a critical air. What do you suppose she was at? Why, getting herself fitted with a chair. She knew how hard it is to be graceful in some of the chairs of novel shape, and was bound to have one that would help instead of hindering her in posing prettily before her visitors. When a girl sets out to be a fascinating, you understand, she must use all the devices available for that purpose. So this creature was neither laudably nor foolish, though the appearance was a little against her. I hung about covertly, and saw that she finally bought the chair, with the proviso that the sides should be lowered two inches.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

At a station on one of the railroads leading out of Detroit the train had arrived and departed, the other day, when the station agent, who had been in the place about three weeks, and was looking for a call every hour to come to Detroit and take charge of the line, was approached by a quiet, well-dressed man, smoking a cigar, who asked:

"Keep you pretty busy here?"

"Yum," was the jerky reply.

"Business on the increase?"

"Yum," again.

"Do you run this station?" asked the quiet man, after a turn on the platform.

"Nobody else runs it," growled the agent. "Have you got a patent car-coupler?"

"Oh, no."

"I was going to tell you to go to number with it if you had. Want special freight rates, I suppose?"

"No, sir."

"I don't give any passes."

"I don't want any."

"Waiting for the next train?"

"Not particularly."

"Want to charter a car?"

"No."

The agent left him on the platform, and entered his office and busied himself for half an hour, when the quiet man looked in on him and asked:

"What's the salary of a position like this?"

"That's my business," was the prompt reply.

"What's the income from this station?"

"Ask the baggage man."

"Your name is —, isn't it?"

"Suppose it is?"

"Oh, nothing much—only I'm the General Manager of the line, and I'd like to exchange cards with you.—Detroit Free Press.

A Sly Old Horse.

Agent "The Blues," I have heard a charming story illustrative of the wonderful intelligence of some horses. One evening the officer on guard, hearing a noise in the stables, concluded that a horse must have got loose. He therefore went with a Corporal of the guard, and, looking through a keyhole saw an old troop-horse lifting up the lid of a corn-bin and munching away at the oats. The officer noticed the door by mistake. The old charger instantly cocked his ears, stole back to his stall, artfully slipped his head back into his halter, and awaited events as if nothing had happened. Seeing this, the officer and Corporal, pretending to be deceived, after looking round the stables, went out again. So soon, however, as the horse heard the lock turned upon them, he slipped his halter and attacked the corn-bin again. After this the crafty old warrior was firmly secured.—London Figaro.

Two young ladies, cousins, both accomplished, handsome and rich, Miss Heloise Wright, of Louisville, Ky., and Miss Emily Egerton, of Cincinnati, have invented what is called an "ironing pan." The iron pan is sunk into the ironing board, and thus kept stationary; being of such depth as to hold the iron in safety while the ironer twists the board in whatever direction desired. They have been offered five thousand dollars for their patent.—Luna State Register.

DECLINE OF MAN.

Nervous weakness, Dyspepsia, Impotence, Sexual Debility, cured by Wells, Health Renewer, $1. At Druggists. Depot, Prentice & Evenson, Janesville.

How often persons have been annoyed by burns clinging to their dress or clothing, and how seldom have they, when cleaning them, given it a thought that Burdock Quot is the most valuable blood cleanser and purifier known, and is sold by every druggist under the name of Burdock Blood Purifiers. Price $1.00. Sold by Palmer & Stevens and Sherer & Co.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Chills and Fever.

"B. VAL," a Plaster at Bayou Sara, La., says: My plantation is in a malarial district. For several years a cold has been held a crop on account of bilious diseases and chills. I was nearly discouraged when I began to use BURDOCK QUOT. The result was marvelous: my patients soon became healthy and robust, and I have had no further trouble.

They relieve the engorged Liver, cleanse the blood from poisonous humors, and cause the bowels to act naturally, without which no one can feel well. Try this remedy freely, and you will gain a healthy Digestion, Vigor, and Sound Body. Pure Blood, Strong Nerves, and a Sound Liver. Price, 25 Cents. Office, 25 Murray St., N. Y.

Benjamin Franklin invented the wheelbarrow. The Bank of England was established in 1694.

DAVIDSON was invented in Norway, and thence imported into Scotland, when a portion of the country fell into Scandinavian hands.

OSMAN, describing the customs of the Britons, says: "There were twelve men, usually, brothers or fathers and sons, living in common."

AMONG nations of civilized antiquity did carpentry attain so high a development as among the Persians, Hebrews and Phoenicians.

DEERFOOT, a Cherokee Indian, who was carried to England in 1758, was able to outrun the swiftest horse in a race-course of two-thirds of a mile.

The Spanish poet Calderon was chaplain to Philip IV., and so fanatical were his sentiments that he has been styled the "poet of the Inquisition."

EMANUEL SWENDBERG, before he became the leader of the peculiar sect which bears his name, was a distinguished engineer and assessor of the Stockholm College of Mines.

PASCARET says that the discovery of a new and shorter route to the Indies is the true key to the maritime movements of the fifteenth and the first half of the sixteenth centuries.

In 1600, Giordano Bruno was burned to death at Rome for upholding the teachings of modern astronomy, and especially maintaining the immensity of the universe and the plurality of worlds.

About Novels.

"Mary" remarked a sanctimonious father the other day to his sentimental fourteen-year-old daughter, "I see I will have to give you the Dickens for reading so many of those trashy novels. I never thought it did a girl much good to Cooper up in the house to keep such things out of her hands, but something must be done at once. If I find another novel in your possession, I shall be tempted to burn it. Those things destroy the peace of a great many otherwise happy homes. There is not a novel in the North or Southworth a fig in the way of intellectual advancement. They disseminate ruin among both Boyesen girls. Many a good, conscientious girl is, by their influence, changed into an Earnest Twister. Their blighting influence is spread over the Holland. It does no one any good to read such trash. They point humanity in too black a guise. They seem to delight in picturing some father who makes it his mission to Robison of his inheritance. The son would have more Sand. I often wonder Verne the world they get their ideas. It pains me to see Hingo about the house like one in a dream. You should Dumas to improve your mind." And then the father went out to see a fellow Abbot some financial matters, and Mary turned on her heel with the air of an injured duchess. She declined to sue for forgiveness.

Burglars and Savings Banks.

"The fact is," said old Mrs. Phipps, who is down to "Erisco on a visit," "the fact is, my dear Mrs. Skidmore, I had the narrowest escape from being ruined the other day you ever heard of."

"Oh, how nice," said Mrs. S., pouring out another cup. "How was it?"

"Why, you know I sold our house and lot last month, and had the money all ready to deposit in the savings bank the next morning, which was the very day of its failure."

"Good gracious!"

"I slept with my money under my pillow, and the next morning when I got ready to start for the bank the money was gone. Some burglars had taken it during the night. An hour afterward the bank burst. Did you ever hear of such a piece of good luck?"

"Luck? Why, you lost your coin all the same."

"Yes, but don't you see they caught the burglars, and, on condition of my not prosecuting them, they returned me fifty cents on the dollar. The bank panicked out only twenty-two. There's no use talking, Hannah, between savings banks and robbers, I'll take my chances with the burglars every time."—San Francisco Post.

There seems to be a rage just now among people who are afflicted with dyspepsia to drink a glass of hot water before breakfast. Astonishing cures are reported; but, on the whole, it seems that the dyspeptics who are content in their prisons of the hot-water cocktail are the ones who have not yet tried it. They are about equally divided with the people who praise the juice of oranges in the morning. The man who praises the juice of apples before breakfast and all the time lives numerously in New Jersey.

Dyspepsia of LONG STANDING.—Don't allow prejudice to prevent a trial of ZORRA for health—But argues want of judgment. A few doses will surprise you. See what Mrs. Forbes, Tilsenburgh, Ont., says.—Sold by Prentice & Evenson.

Starting in the World.

Many an unwise parent labors hard and lives sparingly all his life for the purpose of leaving enough to give his children a start in this world, as it is called. Setting a young man adrift with money left by his relatives is like tying bladders under the arms of one who cannot swim; ten chances to one he will lose his bladders and go to the bottom. Teach him how to swim, and he will never need the bladders. Give your child a sound education and you have done enough for him. See to it that his morals are pure, his mind cultivated, and his whole nature made subservient to laws which govern man, and you have given him what will be of more value than the wealth of the Indies.

And He Sat.

He sat at her feet in quiet peace. He looked into her face and said softly, "Dear, I could sit here forever."

"Could you, love?" answered she.

"Yes, sweet." "You are right sure you could, darling?" "I know it, my own." "Very well, then, you sit there, for I have an engagement to go out with young Mr. Fitzspooner, and I won't be back this evening. Turn down the gas and fasten the night-latch when you go away. Ta, ta, dear." And she went out, leaving him in an awful solitude of her loneliness and his bitter disappointment.—Steuernville Herald.

ALL who are afflicted with salt rheum, itch, scald head, impetigo, and every other eruption of the skin, should use GLENN'S SULPHUR SOAP.
